Ballistic Missile Defense Simulation Support Center (BMD SSC)

MISSION

The Ballistic Missile Defense Simulation Support Center (BMD SSC) was initiated in the summer of 1996 to provide web access for models and simulations as well as on-line support for Ballistic Missile Defense Organization's (BMDO) studies and analyses. BMD SSC was chartered as a Data Center in February 1997 to complement the services and capabilities of the other BMDO data centers. Specifically, the BMD SSC stores and provides access for analysis of alternatives, CINC assessment studies, and architecture studies, as well as developmental test results from systems such as Theater Missile Defense System Exerciser, and all wargames executed by the JNTF. Today, the BMD SSC provides those services and more. While M&S data is still the main focus of this data center, the type of data stored in and accessible through the BMD SSC includes any data that may be of value to the BMDO community.

CAPABILITIES

- Provide customers with a place to store and access BMDO-related models, simulations, results of wargames, exercises, analyses and other data
- Facilitate the use of models, simulations, and other data by authorized users via web-based technology
- Support and directly participate in JNTF programs, wargames, exercises, tests and analyses
- Easy access to standardized models available for distribution in the DoD community
- Rapid document retrieval via the Internet
- Links to other BMDO- and M&S-related web pages
- Capability to run and/or execute simulations (classified only)
